VETERAN FOUND DEAD IN HIS BED

At Home In Brownstown Early This Morning by His Wife.

SUDDEN CALL FOR JOHN SARVER

Was Up at Three O'clock To Give His wife Dose of Medicine.

John Sarver, a veteran of the Civil war, was found dead in bed at his home at Brownstown this morning. He died some time after 3 o'clock and his wife who was sleeping by his side did not know of his death until 6 o'clock when she called him to get up. He failed to respond and an investigation by her revealed the fact that he was dead.

Mr. Sarver had been in his usual health recently and Thursday was on the streets at Brownstown. His wife was sick last night and about 3 o'clock this morning he got up and gave her a dose of medicine. He then retired and it is supposed suffered an attack of heart trouble some time later and died instantly. His wife did not hear him make any noise or disturbance.

He was 68 years old and moved to Brownstown recently from Freetown. He formerly lived in Seymour.

The funeral will be held at Brownstown at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon and the services will be conducted by Rev. Schneider.

BY SPECIAL TRAIN

Blish Milling Co. Receives Wheat and Coal Over Southeastern.

Thursday the Southeastern line brought in a special train load of wheat and coal from Chicago and Terre Haute for the Blish Milling Co. The regular freight trains were laid up on account of the storm and the railroad company made up the special train with the Blish shipments and brought them to Seymour. There were six carloads of wheat and two carloads of coal in the train.

County Meeting.

There will be a meeting of the county Sunday School Association officers and workers Monday in this city at the First National Bank to arrange for program for the next convention.

Basket Ball.

The Seymour basket ball team will play the Crothersville team here this evening. Game called at 7:15. Admission 20 cents.

Ed. and Will Moore who have been in the Schneck hospital for several days suffering from blood poisoning, were able to go to their home today. Ed Moore stepped on a nail causing his trouble while his brother cut his hand with a knife and blood poison followed.

Dean Bottorff, a son of M. F. Bottorff of this city, a few days ago as a member of the Union Implement Co. of Columbus, paid $1,000 for a load of clover seed. He is considered a fine judge of farm seeds.

DIED.

FOSTER—News was received here this morning that John T. Foster, a man well known by the people of Seymour, died at the home of his son, Hiram, near Deputy, Jefferson county, early this morning.

John T. Foster was the son of Hiram and Polly Foster, pioneers in the early settlement of the state. He was born in Jefferson county October 16, 1829 and died at age of 82 years and 3 months. His early life was spent on his father's farm and his education derived from the district schools of that period. August 18, 1853 he was married to Catherine Zener, who died Dec. 19, 1909. In 1852 he moved to the then village of Newry, six miles south-east of Seymour, where he lived until 1870, when he moved to his farm one mile east of Seymour. After the death of his wife he made his home with his son Hiram where he died. He is survived by one son, three grand children and three great-grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements will be made today and the burial will be at River-view cemetery.

Mr. Foster was a man of sterling character; his integrity was never questioned. He was truthful, sensibly benevolent, charitable to the faults of friends, and forgiving to all adversaries. Mr. Foster's religious views were not entirely in harmony with orthodox belief, but he was always careful not to obtrude them in an offensive temper toward those who antagonized his ideas. He was an iron clad Republican, and adhered to the tenets of his party with a constancy that but few men have equalled, yet he never let his religion or politics change or weaken his fidelity to his friends. He was a man of wide information, a studious reader of ancient history and being endowed with a retentive memory was always ready with proof to sustain discussions on all topics. As the head of a family, as a neighbor and a citizen he was held in affectionate and general esteem by all who knew him.

HASHMAN—Howard Hashman, age 20 years, son of Mrs. George Hashman, died Thursday evening at his home in Houston after an illness of several months of consumption. Besides a young wife and mother, two sisters and three brothers survive.

The funeral services will be held Saturday morning at 11 o'clock from the Methodist church. Burial at Lute's cemetery.

E. F. McCafferty the new general foreman at the B. & O. round house will move to the property on North Chestnut street to be vacated by Ed Hancock when he moves to the St. John property which he recently purchased.

George Topie, who was injured several weeks ago by a wagon running over both legs, fracturing one and crushing the other, has recovered sufficiently to be removed to his home today.

The weather bureau gives out the pleasant news that another cold wave is headed for Indiana from the northwest and that the temperature may fall to ten degrees below zero tonight.

City employees were busy with two snow plows today cleaning the sidewalks. It is a big job going over the entire city.

About seven inches of snow fell last night and the ground is now covered to a depth of from ten to twelve inches.

The interurbans had forces of men at work last night cleaning the tracks.

KEYNOTE SPEECH

To Be Delivered at Republican Editorial Association Banquet.

Indianapolis, Ind., January 10.—The Republican campaign of 1912 in Indiana is to open January 25, in Indianapolis, when United States Senator Norris Brown, of Nebraska, speaks at the banquet to be given by the Indiana Republican Editorial Association. Plans for the big banquet indicate that the affair is to be important politically, not only in size and score, but in the significance of the keynote speech to be delivered by Senator Brown. Republicans from every part of the state are to be present at the banquet. The Republican editors propose to see to it that the Republican workers are largely represented at the table. It will not be a dress affair. It will be entirely informal and the spirit of the occasion will be the good, old fashioned, Republican rally spirit.

The editorial banquet is to be held the opening night of the midwinter meeting of the editorial association. It is to be expected that the foregathered Republicans will mingle and enjoy a love feast prior to the banquet itself. The next day the Republican editors will hold business sessions.

It is understood the speech to be made at the banquet will deal with the Republican party record and will present the facts as to the big things achieved by the Republican administration at Washington, D. C. In view of the fact that the Republican campaign in 1912 is to be made largely on the great record made by the Republican party in national management, and on the policies advocated by the Republican party throughout the many years of its splendid progress, the speech of Senator Brown will have more than local importance. It is not too much to say, in fact, that the Republican editorial banquet in Indianapolis is to be an event of national importance politically.

It is understood that Senator Brown's summary of the achievements of the Republican party, and notably the achievements of the party under Taft as president, will be the proper starter for the campaign.

UNDERWOOD A CANDIDATE

Bedford Man Now In Race For Nomination For Prosecutor.

Additional interest in the race for the Democratic nomination for prosecutor has been aroused by the entrance of a Lawrence county candidate.

John H. Underwood, formerly prosecutor in the Lawrence and Monroe circuit has entered the contest. He reached the decision to be a candidate within the past few days. He has written several Democratic leaders here and at Brownstown that he is an active candidate and will be in Jackson county soon.

May Enter Race.

Oscar Abel, a local attorney, is looking over the field and may enter the race for the Democratic nomination for prosecutor in the Lawrence and Jackson circuit.

All Premiums.

At the poultry show at Columbus Ray Bottorff of this county captured all of the premiums on fawn and white Indian Runner ducks. He also took some premiums on chickens.

FOUR MEMBERS OF THE COUNCIL

Braved The Storm and Attended The Special Meeting Thursday Evening.

TWO BIDS WERE RECEIVED

For the Paving of Jeffersonville Avenue.—Were Referred to Board of Works.

The city council held a special session Thursday night to receive bids for the paving with macadam of Jeffersonville avenue from the south line of Tipton street to the south line of South street. Four councilmen, Sherman Day, Misch, Davison, and Buse braved the storm and were present at the session.

Three bids were submitted, the bidders being Ewing Shields, James DeGolyer and A. D. Shields and Harry Marberry. DeGolyer asked and was granted permission to withdraw his bid, he having misunderstood the form of making the bid.

The bid of Shields and Marberry was 95 cents per square yard for the paving, 35 cents per lineal foot for curb and gutter and 45 cents per lineal foot for marginal stone along the railway.

Ewing Shields' bid was 75 cents for paving, 38 cents for curb and gutter and 50 cents for marginal stone.

The bids were referred to the board of works for consideration. No action will be taken until the railway company signs the contract to pay half the total cost of the improvement which it has agreed to do.

Such weather as this tries the metal of mail carriers. Local mail carriers never encountered worse weather conditions than prevail now. Not only is walking made difficult by the snow but all mails are late. The early southbound Pennsylvania train was four hours late this morning and that same train has been from one to four hours late every morning for a week. Scarcely a mail train has been in on time for a week. Late trains always interfere with the delivery schedules and therefore hinder the service. The carriers are working hard and long hours to render the best possible service under such adverse conditions.

Beverage Still Serving.

Though no longer immediately engaged with the affairs of state, Albert J. Beveridge has by no means lost the rank of statesman. However, if any one wishes to reserve the word statesman for those actually in office, then there remains the word publicist, which word, though it at present may have a little too much of academic flavor, the public would find very useful were it to come into more common use.

A publicist, says the dictionary, is a writer versed in the laws of nature and nations the science of public right, the principals of government. A word used particularly to designate those who write on the above subjects as a matter of current interest. According to this definition Mr. Beveridge is surely a publicist of the first rank.

Unless it be Col. Roosevelt, in his present position, no man in America today has a wider publicity for his writings on the principles of government than Mr. Beveridge. This is not necessarily to say that he is at present a leader in the same sense as President Taft, Mr. Bryan and Senator LaFollette, but the contention still holds that, as an informative writer on the principles of government and the science of public right, he is in the first rank.

It is very gratifying to find that he intends to maintain this enviable place. His recent contributions to current knowledge concerning Canada far surpass any other work of the kind, and now in the current number of the Saturday Evening Post he contributes a discussion of the trust problem, and recommendations concerning the same, which is unsurpassed in point of clearness and adaptability for assimilation by the average, busy man of the work-a-day world.

And, withal, what Mr. Beveridge says is sane and convincing. While so many are saying, prosecute this trust and that, and put this man or the other in prison, Mr. Beveridge goes behind all these temporary recommendations and advocates a broad general principle to apply with respect to the government's relation to large corporate business. Mr. Beveridge's contention is for Federal incorporation and control, and this idea for the so-called trust problem has never had a cleaner or more convincing exposition than Mr. Beveridge gives it.

This article will exert a tremendous influence in the way of centering public attention on this plan and lining up sentiment in support of Federal incorporation and control of corporate business. Though now out of the Senate, Mr. Beveridge remains one of America's most helpful men. His influence throughout the nation is far weightier than his Indiana neighbors seem to realize.—Lafayette courier.

Cliff Markle, well known locomotive engineer on the Indiana division of the B. & O. Friends of Mr. Markle did not know that he was in ill health and were surprised to learn that he was forced to have an operation performed. He had been complaining for some time and at times the pain was so great that he could not ride his engine. He made a visit to the Olney Sanitarium and was informed that the suffering was from appendicitis but not in an acute form.—Washington Democrat.

POLICE COURT

Several Fines Assessed By Mayor Swope.

As the result of a little altercation last night in the regions of the New Lynn hotel where custards, pies and other parts of the menu are produced James Evans, head cook, and Elwood Harris, a porter, were arrested, the former on a charge of assault and battery and the latter for provoke. In the mayor's court this morning Harris was acquitted while Evans was fined $1 and costs. Evans came from Indianapolis recently.

John D. Everhart of Clark county Friday night acknowledged that he had been drunk and paid $11 for his spree.

James Brown, a St. Louis traveling salesman, this morning was fined for intoxication and stayed a fine of $1 and costs.

NEW GAME

Gentleman From Jackson County Introduced to It.

The Indianapolis Sun says: H. C. Mitchell, Jackson county, was introduced to a brand new game Wednesday night. At least he thought it was a brand new game. Really it is an old, old game, as he was informed by the police Thursday.

It runs thus: An affable stranger meets gentleman from Jackson, and "shoots a lot of palaver and greased air" into him. The gentleman from Jackson proves a ready absorbent, and agrees, that joy may continue to bubble, to "lap up a few" where the brass rails are shiny and the art on the walls is unadorned. Then enters sleep, and the awakening with pockets empty and memory a mist.

"I am out $8 or $9," admitted Mitchell, "but I don't know whether the stranger stole it from me or I spent it."

R. L. Mosely Trades Another Farm For Another Machine.

R. L. Mosely's taste of automobilizing, which he enjoyed under difficulties last summer, gave him an appetite for more. He has just traded 60 acres of land near Freetown to an Indianapolis man for a Buick car which is practically new. He expects to bring it down from the city as soon as the weather moderates and is planning to enjoy the fresh air and scenery as he raises the dust on the Jackson county roads the coming season. He says he is certain of his pleasure this year if the tires only hold out.

IT is not hardships that make men brave and women heroic. It is the ideas which they mix with their daily bread and butter. —Henderson.

A WORD TO THE COOK.

Do you have a well-defined plan for the meals of the day?

Do you try to balance the meals so that there is never an over-abundance of any one food principle, like starchy foods, meats or sweets?

Do you plan your menus in regard to the individuals served? For example, the office worker and the out-of-door worker need a quite different menu, as does the growing child and the invalid.

Do you plan when you are making a custard to prepare enough to make a salad dressing, too? This is easily done by leaving out the sugar and flavoring until the custard is cooked, then add sugar and flavoring and you have a custard to serve as a sauce or a floating island, and to the remainder add salt, mustard and pepper and you have a salad dressing, with but the preparation of one.

Do you study the principles of cookery and enjoy your work, realizing that it is a dignified work, or do you call yourself a drudge? "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

When using cooking dishes if they are washed at once, not allowing them to stand, they will wash much easier and other work that follows will not be hindered.

Coffee is much improved, if not freshly ground, to put into the dry pot and shake over the fire until thoroughly hot.

When buying soap it is economy to get it in large quantities, as one gets more for the money, and soap that is stored and dried will last much longer.

It is a wonderful help in an emergency to have a few canned foods on hand, such as canned clams, to be made into a delicious chowder with a few minutes' work, or canned soups of different kinds are quickly prepared, and there is nothing more satisfying after a cold ride or for a late supper than a cup of steaming hot soup.

There is no bread, how well prepared, that tastes quite as good as home-made bread. To many housekeepers who are cook and housemaid, bread-making is a great burden, but with the advent of the bread-mixer, the disagreeable part of bread-making is eliminated. The bread is mixed at night, when the man of the house might turn the mixer for exercise, and in the morning it is ready to mix again, and then rise in the loaves. If for no other reason than cleanliness, the bread-mixer pays for itself.

Sunday School Lesson

JANUARY 14, 1912.

Birth of John the Baptist.

LESSON:—Luke, 1:57-80.

GOLDEN TEXT:—Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people.—Luke 1:68.

Will some one tell why the visit of Gabriel to Mary, with the most wonderful announcement ever made to any mortal, is wholly omitted, and the Christmas lesson of Dec. 24 again assigned for Feb. 4? It is not ours to reason why, but simply to pray, Lord talk with us by the way and open to us the Scriptures. May each one notice and firmly believe the assurance of the supernatural birth and Mary's acceptance of it, perhaps little dreaming the cost to herself of such an honor (verses 35, 38). Then notice the plain and simple prediction concerning the throne of David and the coming kingdom (verses 30-33). See Elizabeth and Zacharias filled with the Holy Spirit and note all their words (verses 41, 67). Observe carefully the R. V. of verse 37, "No word from God shall be void of power." I have in my mind associated with this Isa. lv. 11, "It shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please." When Elizabeth, filled with the Holy Spirit, said, "Blessed is she that believed, for there shall be a performance of those things which were told her from the Lord" (verse 45), then Mary burst forth with, "My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour," closing with, "As He spake to our fathers, to Abraham and to his seed forever." Many of Mary's utterances remind us of Hannah's prayer or song in I Sam. ii, 1-10, closing with, "He shall give strength unto His King and exalt the horn of His anointed." This is the first reference to Christ as the Messiah or anointed one. Compare John i, 41. The son of Elizabeth being born at the full time and the eighth day, or time for circumcision, having come, there was a little perplexity about a name for the boy, as some would have him called by his father's name, but his mother said, "He shall be called John." They made signs to his father, who, to the surprise of all, wrote, "His name is John" (verses 57-63). See verse 13 and find the other six who were called by name before they were born, two of them several hundred years before, or at least one.

Notice the release of Zacharias from his affliction which came upon him because of unbelief. Faith in Jesus Christ, the reception of Him as one's personal Saviour, not only delivers from the wrath to come, but delivers from all bondage. The truth shall make you free. If the Son shall make you free ye shall be free indeed (John viii, 32, 36). The hand of the Lord upon the child reminds us that he was to be filled with the Spirit from his birth (verses 15, 66), and the two sayings make us think of Ezek. iii, 14; viii, 3. This is your need and mine, dear reader, the hand of the Lord upon us and the Holy Spirit filling and controlling. From verse 67 to the last verse of the chapter we have the sayings of Spirit filled Zacharias, telling us of the kingdom which would have come had the people been willing to receive John and Jesus and the kingdom, but which, because of their rejection of all, is still in abeyance, waiting for the King to come again in glory to set up His kingdom of peace and righteousness. He had spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets in all the Old Testament Scriptures concerning a kingdom to include all nations, with Israel a redeemed people at the center (verses 68-75; Ps. lxxii, 11, 18; lxxvii, 1-7; Isa. ii, 1-4; ix, 1-22, and everywhere). The prophets told, however, of a Messiah who would be despised and rejected and be cut off and have nothing as well as a Messiah who as son of David would sit on David's throne (Isa. llii; Dan. vii, 13, 14; ix, 26 margin), but they did not tell of the long interval of this present age between the sufferings and the glory, when during the postponement of the kingdom and the scattering of Israel He will gather out by the gospel 2 people to share His glory and reign with Him when the kingdom comes. This was reserved to be communicated to Paul and through him to us. See Rom. xvi, 25-27; xi, 25-27; Eph. iii. Concerning the postponement of the kingdom until His return see Luke xix, 11-13; Acts iii, 20, 21, and notice the joyful worship of the disciples when they understood that He would come again in due time to fulfill all the prophecies concerning His kingdom (Luke xxiv, 25-27, 44-53). The words of Zacharias and of all the prophets shall be as literally fulfilled as were all the predictions concerning His birth and humiliation, and the time draws ever nearer. Meantime while we wait for the literal fulfillment on Israel we may find in our lives, as His redeemed ones by His precious blood, many a fulfillment and manifestation of these precious words. If we are in Christ we are delivered from the wrath to come and are the seed of Abraham and joint heirs with Him of the whole world (I Thess. i, 10; Rom. iv, 13; viii, 17; Gal. iii, 29). Whether salvation be individual or national, it must be through the house of David and the King of the Jews, for salvation is of the Jews, and there is none other (John iv, 22; Acts iv, 12). If we are His redeemed ones, waiting for the kingdom, we may by His grace serve Him without fear in holiness and righteousness.

THE LESSON QUIZ.

(Copyright, 1910, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D. D.) The Birth of John the Baptist, Luke 1:57-80.

Golden Text—Blessed be the Lord God of Israel; for he hath visited and redeemed his people, Luke 1:68.

(1.) Verse 57—What effect did it have upon Elizabeth when she found out that she was to become a mother?

(2.) Why have all christian wives who are about to become mothers, reason to rejoice and be inspired, as was the mother of John the Baptist?

(3.) Verse 58—If our hearts do not rejoice with those who are rejoicing, what does that suggest?

(4.) What special reason had these good people to rejoice at the birth of Elizabeth's babe?

(5.) Verse 59—When should the religious education of a child commence, and how should it be accomplished? (This is one of the questions that may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

(6.) Is there any public way to-day which we may profitably adopt in dedicating a child to God, which in any way answers to circumcision?

(7.) Verses 60-63—What should be our chief consideration in naming a child?

(8.) Why did they name this child John?

(9.) Would it be folly or wisdom for us in these days, to expect an angel to tell us the name to give to an infant? Why?

(10.) Why did they all marvel so much when the name of John was given to this babe?

(11.) Verse 64—What were the circumstances in connection with Zacharias losing his speech?

(12.) To what extent, if any, does doubt take away the speech of a good man to-day?

(13.) Can you mention an old testament character who because of doubt about his power of speech, caused God to be angry with him?

(14.) Verses 65-66—What did Zacharias probably discourse about, to create such fear in the community?

(15.) Why do sinners tremble when the gospel is preached with power?

(16.) Verse 67—What is the difference between a man filled with the Holy Spirit and an ordinary man?

(17.) Are all persons who are filled with the Holy Spirit prophets?

(18.) Verses 68-74—What was the theme of Zacharias in his prophetic discourse?

(19.) What part of the things he foretold, actually came to pass?

(20.) Would you say that all the things that John foretold would have happened, if the Jews had accepted Jesus, and why?

(21.) Verse 75—Are all those who accept Jesus able to live "in holiness and righteousness all the days of their lives"?

(22.) Verses 76-80—What was the character of John the Baptist, and what were the results of his work?

THE BEST PROOF

Seymour Citizens Cannot Doubt It.

Doan's Kidney Pills were used—they cured.

The story was told to Seymour residents.

Time has strengthened the evidence. Has proven the cure permanent.

The testimony is home testimony—The proof convincing.

It can be investigated by Seymour residents.

Louis Scheurich, 317 W. Oak St., Seymour, Ind., says: "I suffered from pains across the small of my back, accompanied by weakness through my loins that made it hard for me to get about. When a friend told me that he had used Doan's Kidney Pills with beneficial results and advised me to try them, I did so. I received great relief from the first and continued use resulted in a cure. I can say that Doan's Kidney Pills act just as represented.

Re-endorsement.

On April 14, 1910 when Mr. Scheurich was interviewed, he added to the above. "It gives me pleasure to again recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Since this remedy cured me of kidney trouble my health has been excellent."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Quinine in the Good Old Days.

There is a whole lot of difference in the price of quinine now and 50 years ago. Then it sold for $5 and sometimes more an ounce. Now it can be bought for one-tenth of that amount. The $5 quinine was taken in syrup, baked apples, slippery elm or anything that would cover up the stuff and partly disguise the taste.—Madisonville Hustler

What Makes A Woman?

One hundred and twenty pounds, more or less, of bone and muscle don't make a woman. Its a good foundation. Put into it health and strength and she may rule a kingdom. But that's just what Electric Bitters give her. Thousands bless them for over-coming fainting and dizzy spells and for dispelling weakness, nervousness, headache and tired, listless, worn out feeling. HAD TO REFRESH ANDY'S MEMORY

He Had Forgotten That He Had Recommended Knox.

HAD NEVER READ SHERMAN LAW

By the Same Token the Ironmaster, Much to the Astonishment of Stanley Committee, Declared He Had Never Heard of Dingley Law, and It Was Only on Advice of Counsel That He Remembered He Had Urged McKinley to Make Knox Attorney General.

Washington, Jan. 12.—The Stanley committee's investigation of the United States Steel corporation brought out the name of Secretary of State Knox. Mr. Carnegie, who was again an all-day witness, testified in reply to questions by Democratic members of the committee that Mr. Knox had been one of the attorneys for the Carnegie Steel company back in the days when pooling agreements were in vogue. Mr. Carnegie insisted, however, that neither business men nor lawyers were certain at that time that pooling agreements fell within the condemnation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

This was only one of several interesting phases of the Carnegie testimony. Mr. Carnegie acknowledged that he had made political contributions, but was not required to go into details. He declared over the objection of counsel for the steel corporation that the present day prices in the iron and steel trade are fixed and maintained by agreement. He also expressed the opinion that the duty on steel products could be removed without injuring American manufacture.

Representative McGillicuddy, a Democrat, Maine, was the member of the committee who juggled Mr. Knox's name into the hearing.

"I understand," said Mr. McGillicuddy, "that in the period from 1890 to 1900 you knew very little about the scope and purpose of the Sherman law?"

"That is true," said Mr. Carnegie.

"Was Philander C. Knox one of the attorneys of the Carnegie Steel company?" asked the representative from Maine.

Mr. Carnegie replied in the affirmative. Mr. Knox, he added, was associated with Judge J. H. Reed, who was before the committee as Mr. Carnegie's personal counsel, as attorneys for the Carnegie company.

"Now, during all the years that this firm acted as counsel for your firm, did either of them advise you as to the Sherman law?" asked McGillicuddy.

"I never heard a word on the subject from either of them," said Andy.

"Did you not recommend this same Mr. Knox for attorney general under the McKinley administration?" asked the persistent Scotchman from Maine.

"I never had anything to do with it," replied Mr. Carnegie. Then he scratched his head and turned to his counsel, Judge Reed.

"Did I, judge?" asked Carnegie of his lawyer.

"You wrote a letter of recommendation to Mr. McKinley," Judge Reed whispered.

"That's so," observed Carnegie. "I did not recall it at the moment."

Representative McGillicuddy then switched to the tariff. He remarked that the profits of the Carnegie company jumped from $6,000,000 in 1897, the year the Dingley law was passed, to $40,000,000 in 1900. "How much did the tariff have to do with the increase in profits after the passage of the Dingley law?" asked the Democratic member.

Much to the astonishment of the committeemen, Mr. Carnegie declared he had never heard of the Dingley law.

Mr. Carnegie aroused the interest of the committeemen by declaring in the face of objections made by counsel that the age of competition had passed in the iron and steel business. Present prices, he asserted, are fixed and maintained by agreement. "There is no competition now," said Mr. Carnegie, "because the men interested are able to sit down and fix prices."

In regard to criminal prosecutions under the Sherman anti-trust law, Mr. Carnegie was of the opinion that the government should deal charitably with the men who have violated that statute. "Do not pursue these men in a spirit of vengeance," said Mr. Carnegie. "Customs were followed in the old days that are now looked upon as unlawful."

Representative Beall did not take much stock in Mr. Carnegie's contention that many men had violated the Sherman law innocently. He suggested that if the criminal features of the law had been enforced a good many night schools would have sprung up to teach millionaires how to obey the statute.

"Sunday schools would have been more appropriate under the circumstances," Mr. Carnegie replied.

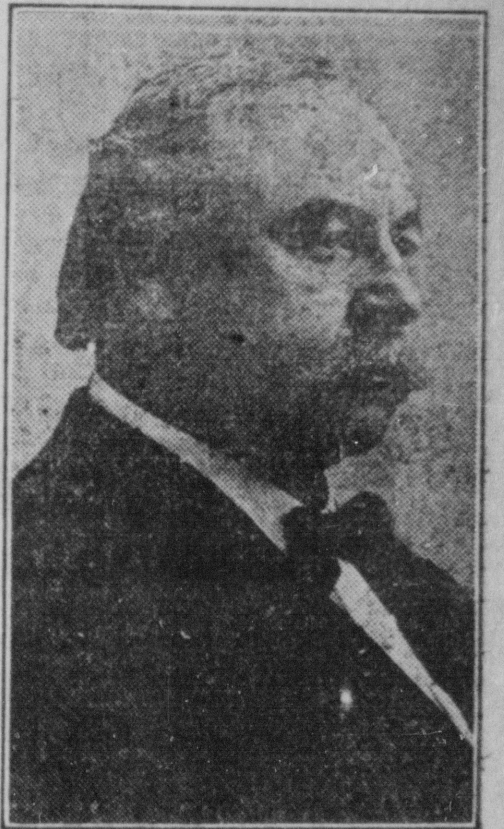

Mr. Carnegie pointed out that the Sherman law had not been interpreted by the courts until years after it had been passed.

"The supreme court has never passed on the ten commandments, but most of us obey them," chipped in Chairman Stanley.

"But how do you expect men who are trying to make a living to be posted on the laws?" asked Andy. Then, folding his hands and rolling his eyes, the ironmaster exclaimed: "A man who has a clear conscience, knowing that he has done nothing wrong will fully, need never worry."

It was after a long discussion of the Sherman anti-trust law and possible legislation to correct present conditions that Representative Stanley picked up a slip of paper and reading what was on it, asked Mr. Carnegie if he thought it would be advisable for congress to enact such a law.

"Ridiculous, preposterous!" exclaimed the ironmaster with a great show of confidence in his own opinion.

"Well," replied Stanley, solemnly, "what I have just read is the first section of the Sherman anti-trust law, that has been on the statute books since 1890."

Mr. Carnegie looked somewhat flabbergasted, while the committeemen chuckled. "Oh," exclaimed Mr. Carnegie, after he had caught his breath, "I never read the Sherman law and know very little about its details."

WRECKED AT STATION

Twentieth Century Limited Crashes Into Another Train at Chicago.

Chicago, Jan. 12.—The Twentieth Century Limited, the Lake Shore's fast train, after travelling about seventy miles an hour all the way from New York, was wrecked last evening as it entered the Chicago station. Ten persons were injured, none seriously.

The Lake Shore train telescoped three cars of a Chicago & Eastern Illinois train that had just discharged its passengers and was backing out of the depot. The switchmen apparently forgot that the fast train was due and the C. & E. I. coaches were backed across the tracks on which the Twentieth Century comes into the depot.

SCIENCE AND INVENTION

DEVICE SAVES FALL ON ICE

Steel Creeper on the Heel of a Shoe Makes Wearer Sure-Footed on Slipperiest Sidewalk.

With the days of icy pavements here the creeper designed by a Philadelphia man leaps into the limelight. It is said that a person wearing a pair of these devices on his shoes need not fear the slipperiest sidewalk or street. The creeper is made of spring steel and the illustration shows the design. The ends terminate in hooks which engage the heel of the shoe on the sides. There are no screws or straps to hold the device in position, and it requires only a few seconds to put it on or take it off. So easy is this operation, in fact, that a person may conveniently carry a pair of the creepers in his pocket and put them on when he approaches a particularly dangerous stretch of pavement, taking them off again as soon as this is passed. The corrugations on the steel spring keep it free from accumulations of ice or hard snow.

REST FOR A TOBACCO PIPE

To Overcome Disadvantages of Bowl That Is Liable to Tip and Spill Ashes Clip Is Invented.

One of the disadvantages of the ordinary tobacco pipes is the fact that it cannot be laid down without danger of spilling the tobacco ashes, and there is even the possibility of accidentally setting fire to material coming in contact with glowing embers of tobacco. To prevent such conditions, a Canadian inventor has designed a clip adapted to grasp the stem of the pipe and provided with legs which will support the bowl of the pipe in an upright position, says the Scientific American. These legs may be folded against the stem when desired. Instead of employing a clip, he also provides a ferrule or sleeve, equipped with supporting legs, which may be used to connect the stem with the mouth-piece.

OBSERVE FIVE NEW COMETS

Two in Southern Hemisphere and Three in Northern Engaging Attention of Astronomers.

There are now five comets engaging the attention of observers—two in the southern hemisphere, three in the northern. Of these three, the most conspicuous is Brooks', situated between Ursae Majoris and Lyrae. Its position causes the tail of the Great Bear to appear to have four stars in it, instead of the usual three. The fourth is, of course, Brooks' comet; it is now between the second and third magnitude in brightness. It has been well photographed at Greenwich, and shows a tail 15 degrees long. The second comet of our hemisphere is Quenisset's—the first discoverer its position on September 28 was right ascension, 15 hours, 1 minute, 29.4 seconds, and declination 64 degrees, 62 minutes, 8 second. It is of the seventh magnitude, and can be easily seen in a small telescope. The third comet is the new one discovered by Beljowski at Simles, Russia, at 3 a. m. on September 29. Its right ascension was 10 hours, and declination N. 8 degrees. It is moving eastward, and was visible low down in the sky to the east from 4:30 to 5:30 a. m.

MARCH ON PEKIN SET FOR MONDAY

President Sun Will Go at Head of His Troops.

IS CONFIDENT OF SUCCESS

The Cantonese Soldiery Now in Training Are Regarded as Superior to the Imperial Troops, and Their Victory Is Considered Certain in the South—New Government Will Resist to the Utmost Russia's Aggression.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 12.—An official denial is given by the foreign office of the reports that the Russian government had addressed demands to the Chinese government in regard to Mongolia, or was planning the occupation of Mongolia.

Shanghai, Jan. 12.—Russia's late claims in Mongolia have stirred up the republican leaders. Dr. Wu Ting Fang and Wen Tsung Yao say that if the statement in regard to these claims given out by the Chinese foreign office is right, Russia is trying to take advantage of China's trouble for her own selfish commercial ends. They express the hope that her action has been misconstrued, but otherwise the republicans say they will resist the Russian claims and do their utmost to maintain the integrity of China. Russian interference, they say, is likely to have a most deplorable influence on the general international relations and is calculated to awaken an anti-foreign feeling in Cuba.

A renewal of hostilities, according to Republican authorities has been fixed for next Monday, when the march on Peking will begin unless the abdication of the emperor is announced in the meantime.

Dr. Wu Ting Fang, the republican leader, who has been to Nanking to confer with President Sun Yat Sen, has returned here, but refuses to talk as to future plans. Sun is credited with the intention of accompanying the republican troops on their northward march. He is confident of the success of the rebel troops, and it is reported that he considers the Cantonese soldiery now in training superior to the imperialists.

STILL SPREADING

Revolt Against the Manchus Declared in Chinese Turkestan.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 12.—A dispatch from Kuldja, in Chinese Turkestan, states that there has been a Republican uprising there which is headed by a Chinese general. The rebels seized the arsenal and demolished the fort. All the officials were arrested.

Three hundred Manchus, including the governor, were killed. A school was burned and fifty-seven children who were in it lost their lives.

A republic was declared and a proclamation issued which guarantees that there will be an orderly government.

SENTENCED TO DEATH

Seven Spanish Rioters Hear Doom Pronounced by High Court.

Madrid, Jan. 12.—The supreme court has brought to an end one of the most prominent trials since that of Francisco Ferrer. It may be recalled that on Sept. 18 last, when Spain was under martial law, due to a revolutionary strike, several rioters from Cullera attacked Judge Lopez Rueda and a police chief, Senor Dolz, who were on their way to that city to investigate the sabotage on the railroads. Senor Dolz broke away and swam the Juar river, but was stoned and stabbed to death. The judge barricaded himself in the town hall, but the mob forced the doors and split his head with a hatchet. The rioters also stabbed the attorney, Senor Beltram, and another man, to death. They then dragged the bodies through the streets until they were unrecognizable.

The supreme court has passed a death sentence on seven of those who took part in the outrage. Ten were sentenced to hard labor and three were given two years in prison. Two were acquitted.

CHANGE OF EYE COLOR

The possibility of a man's eyes changing color as the result of mental shock or physical ill treatment was the subject of an interesting discussion by a number of surgeons in the eye ward of one of the great London hospitals. One of the surgeons stated: "It is common knowledge that great physical hardships may suddenly turn the hair white. The loss of color here follows on certain chemical changes, due to disturbances of nutrition, taking place in the tiny particles of coloring matter which give the hair its color. "All infants at birth have blue eyes. In some babies immediately after birth pigment granules begin to develop in the iris. Thus they become brown or black eyed. In others, however, no such pigment formation takes place and the eyes remain blue or gray throughout life. If this at present blue eyed convict is really the missing brown eyed banker a reasonable explanation of the discrepancy in the eye colorings would be that under the stress of physical and mental shock the coloring matter which he had in early life disappeared, leaving the eyes the original blue coloring present at birth."

NO TELEGRAPH POLES

The use of telegraph poles has been dispensed with entirely by the officials of one Welsh town, by making an arrangement with the property owners to allow the wires to be strung from house to house. There was some hesitation on the part of quite a considerable number, but the desired permission was quite generally secured conditionally in one portion of the town and the improved appearance was so great that there was little trouble in securing the permission of all property holders. Now the new condition is a source of great pride on the part of the residents.

RAT CATCHER OF PARIS

George Menard of Paris holds a unique position, being the official rat catcher of the great system of sewers. Carrying a light and a bag he traverses the sewers and seems to hypnotize the rats, which are captured alive and sold for the training of rat dogs and for rat fights.

TO KEEP WITCHES AWAY

Some curious superstitions are gathered round even so eminently a practical thing as beer. In Scotland it used to be the custom to throw a handful of salt and a little dry malt into the mash to keep the witches from it, and the cautious housewife in houses where they brewed their own beer used to throw a live coal into the vat to save the liquor from the frolicsome interference of fairies.

The addition of salt, by the way, to beer in the course of brewing was supposed to be for the unholy purpose of exciting thirst. It may possibly have been used to this end by the unscrupulous, but the real reason was legitimate. Salt moderates the fermentation and makes the liquor fine.

FOSSIL SEA TORTOISE

The perfect fossil of a huge sea tortoise 30 inches in diameter has been found in Mount Baldy, 3,000 feet above the present sea level, near Los Angeles, Cal. It is thought that this is a relic of a geological age 400,000 years ago, when all the western part of the country was still under the sea, and the Rocky mountains were either submerged or only showed their tips as jagged islets.

SAME OLD STYLES

From the fresco paintings of women in Cretan palaces of the period about 2,000 B. C. it is learned that the women of that time pinched in their waists, had flounced or accordion plaited skirts, wore an elaborate coiffure, shoes with high heels and hats which might have come from a Parisian hat shop, while one woman might be described as wearing a jupe culotte.

SKIN FOR SANDPAPER

An ancient mariner and fisherman says he well remembers when the dried skin of the dogfish was used for sandpaper, and good sharp cutting stuff it was, too. The old salt further says there are many sorts of imitation dried cod on the market and that the tail of a young dogfish is fine for it.

Madame Merri's Advice and Suggestions

Reply to "Blue Eyes."

I am a young girl, fifteen years old, and a constant reader of your column. I do not go out very much and would like you to help me in a few ways. When a young man asks you to eat supper with him, is it to be understood that he is to take you home? A young man came home with me from a party and he wanted me to give him a good-night kiss. I wouldn't give it to him. Did I do right? Do you think it is proper for a young girl to stand on the street corners and talk to the boys? I have a friend who does this. Do you think I am too young to have company once in a while? How is my writing and composition?—Blue Eyes.

Surely, if a young man invites you to supper he should see that you are safely returned to your home. You did exactly right in not kissing the young man, and I hope you will continue to be strong and brave enough to resist. I almost believe I would not go with that man any more, and let him know the reason why. A man should not put a girl in a position that she will regret afterward, and no girl of fifteen should kiss men promiscuously; it is not a good thing to do, but there are exceptions to all rules. Your writing is very good and the letter is fairly well composed.

A Bride's Outfit.

How many towels, dish towels, sheets and pillow cases does a bride need? I am very young, never had any experience and no one but you to ask. Please help me.—A Bride-Elect.

That is just what I am here for, to help those who have no one to ask. Much depends upon how large a home you are to maintain after you are married. A modest little bride whom I asked tells me that she is doing very comfortably with a dozen sheets, same number of pillow cases, three table cloths, two luncheon cloths or sets of doilies, three dozen napkins of three sizes, two dozen towels, six bath towels, a dozen wash cloths, four roller towels, two dozen dish towels. She has three single beds to use all the time. I think you will find this list the least you can manage nicely with; add as many more as your are able from time to time.

Reply to "Girlie."

I have been reading your part of the paper and have seen that you help many other girls. As I have no mother, I come to you for help and hope to see an answer to my questions in the paper soon.—Girlie.

Your letter is rather long to print in full, as space is so limited for "Questions and Answers." It is always a girl's place to speak first, so the next time you meet your friend stop and speak to him and I think you can adjust matters.

Place at Table for Guests of Honor. Please tell me in next Sunday's paper which is considered proper—to seat the honored guests at the table at the right of the host and hostess or to the left? There is a difference of opinion about it.—"Idylwild."

The generally observed rule is this, the honored woman guest is at the right of host, the man at right of hostess, next in honor at left of host and hostess.

Progressive Dinner Party.

Our club of six girls has decided to give a progressive dinner party during the early part of the approaching holidays, and ask six boys. I thought I would write and ask you for a few helpful suggestions on what to do.

What would you have for the six courses?

How can we keep up the spirit of fun? Do we need place cards at every house? Should the partners be mixed up every course?—Evelyn.

The best way to conduct a progressive dinner party is for each hostess to arrange her own centerpiece and place cards, keeping her plans a secret. This lends excitement and interest, and there is never a dull moment. At the first house have raw oysters or canapés, second place furnishes the soup with celery and olives, third hostess has a heavy course, fourth the salad and cheese wafers, fifth dessert, sixth coffee, nuts, fruit.

Reply to "A Brown-Eyed Girl."

It is impossible to reply "In next Sunday's paper," much as I would like to grant all requests to do so. The paper has a most forehanded way of keeping ahead of the game, and the department is made up in advance, so if replies are very urgent, sent me a self-addressed, stamped envelope, in care of the paper, for a personal reply. You are plenty stout enough and will no doubt weigh more as you grow older, and I should think you were attractive. Most young girls are. I think eighteen is very young to be engaged, and my advice is to wait at least two years. Enjoy your youth a while longer. Do not pay any attention to what the girls say; they are probably only thoughtless, and it is quite natural to tease. As long as you are sure of your own conduct, do not worry. Do not wrangle over car fare; if the friend paid it and you offer it back and he refuses, let it go.

MADAME MERRI.

IN VOGUE

Russian laces are used in bands and sport tunics on many of the smart frocks.

Huge buttons of fur distinguish many of the season's fur garments and many of the scarfs are buttoned.

Detachable rhinestone buckles of all sizes and shapes are used for slippers and shoes, both black and colored.

Muffs of fur or satin are trimmed with fringe, narrow and wide, and evening scarfs, which are made of gauze and gathered in the middle of the back and over the arms, are also edged with a narrow silver or gold fringe that orientalizes the whole costume.

A more generally useful hat can scarcely be found than one of the soft, inexpensive felts that come in all sorts of shapes and colors. They are smart without any trimming at all, save for the narrow ribbon crown band, and are suitable for morning wear in town as well as for all times out of doors.

Modish Costumes

"CASTLE" ON PUGET SOUND

On the summit of a high hill back of Port Townsend, Washington, the state's port of entry, and overlooking the town, stands a unique building, much resembling a castle. In the early days, when there were no neighboring residences, the structures often underwent searching scrutiny by eyes aboard ship peering through binoculars or field glass, as it does to this day when some sharp-visioned tourist picks it out as something distinct from the ordinary type of building. The "castle," as the structure is called by the people of the town, was built many years ago, in boom times, by an eccentric Englishman, who through his habits and eccentricities was known as a hermit. There are, perhaps, few building locations in the United States affording views as grand as the one where this freak in architecture stands. It stands nearly 300 feet above sea level, immediately overlooking a beautiful little bay with numerous inlets, and beyond great stretches of America's fir-fringed and greatest inland water way, Puget Sound. In the distance are the green foothills, and beyond the majestic Olympic range, snow-capped the year 'round, and behind which old Sol sinks from sight amid a wealth of color month in and out.

After the old Englishman's death, "the castle" passed to the United States, acquired by purchase of land for use as a military reservation. The building is of brick, and is substantially built and well finished within.

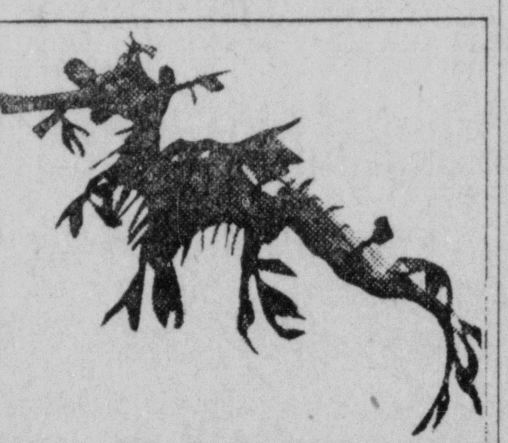

ELECTRICITY AND CROPS

Mr. Priestly of Bristol university has again drawn attention to the remarkable results of the application of high tension electricity to growing crops. Not only is a larger yield obtained, which is important to the farmer, but, in the case of fruit crops, such as strawberries, the fruit ripens some days earlier, a matter of the utmost importance to the market gardener. The present method of electrification is by means of wires stretched some distance above the growing crops. The effects may be described as an intensification of the action of the thunder-cloud, and might be equally startling to the heedless investigator. The original method of electrification was to water the crops from electrically charged cans, and the effect of this, says the University Correspondent, was similar to that of the thunder shower.

AN 80-MILE PRECIPICE

Capt. C. G. Rawling, a member of the British expedition that recently explored Dutch Guiana, describes what may be the greatest unbroken precipice in the world. It runs, he says, for a distance of 80 miles from Mount Carstenz westward to the Charles Louis mountains. Its greatest sheer height is at Mount Leonard Darwin. The explorers were never in a position to measure with the theodolite a sheer height of this immense precipice exceeding 6,500 feet, but from many views obtained of it while he was climbing Captain Rawling has no hesitation in stating that the greatest perpendicular height is not less than 10,500 feet, or almost exactly two miles.

SEA-DRAGON OF AUSTRALIA

Here is one of the wonders of the deep sea, the sea-dragon of Australia. It is so richly ornamented with loose and flapping ribbons of skin that it reminds one much of the fearsome creature that has been adopted as the national emblem of China.

BURMESE SPELLS

Some curious sidelights on the Burman's character are contained on a report on the work of the Archaeological survey in Burmah, says the Times of India. It is stated that the Burman highly prizes the following gems: Ruby, diamond or crystal, pear, coral, topaz, sapphire, cat's-eye, amethyst and emerald. Collectively they ward off sickness or danger. The cat's eye is supposed to secure invulnerability in war. Incantations are muttered over some or all of these stones, and the water in which they are immersed is drunk in order to secure immunity from all evil. Spells are uttered over rubies, and they are inserted as amulets in the flesh of men who desire to be immune from wounds inflicted by sword, spear or gun.

JEWEL WEIGHS 243 POUNDS

Jewel experts throughout the world have been thrown into a state of excitement by the appearance of a beryl that weighs 243.1 pounds, and is 18.9 inches high, and from 15.75 inches to 16.5 inches in width. This is the largest beryl ever found, and is reported to have been sold by its finder for nearly $25,000. The beryl was picked up by a Turk in the state of Minas Geraes, Brazil. Its color is a greenish blue, and it is absolutely free from impurities.

FEDERAL COURT PRAISES BURNS

Detective Is Hailed As Nation's Greatest Present Servant.

IS DISCHARGED FROM CUSTODY

Declaring That the Indiana Statute Is in Conflict With the Federal Law in Relation to Requisitions, Judge Anderson Holds That William J. Burns Was Not at Fault in Taking John McNamara Before Police Judge.

Indianapolis, Jan. 12.—After argument on the writ by which he was taken from the custody of the local authorities, Judge A. B. Anderson of the United States district court discharged William J. Burns from custody. This action relieves Detective Burns from the indictment for kidnapping J. J. McNamara returned by the county grand jury. Detective Hossick of Los Angeles, who was also indicted for kidnapping was not before the court, but attorneys say that the decision applies to him as well and that the indictment in the local court will be dismissed.

Burns was not in court during the argument. He telegraphed that his train was five hours late, but the court said the argument would be heard, and he would pass on the case formally when Burns arrived. When the detective reached the federal building court was reconvened and the formal decision rendered.

Judge Anderson took the view that the Indiana statute is in conflict with the United States statute in respect to requisitions and that Burns simply made a mistake, if mistake it was, in going into the police court with his prisoner instead of into a county court. Said the court:

"Burns just made a mistake as to which officer should take him. But assuming the statute is valid, and assuming everything on behalf of the statute of Indiana and its validity on the face of the facts here and the facts as we all know them, a requisition was properly issued by the governor of California upon the governor of Indiana. It was properly honored by the governor of Indiana and in an honest effort to carry out the laws of Indiana they made a mistake, assuming it was a mistake, of going into the wrong room in the courthouse. And upon that, a citizen, I will stop to say, who has rendered greater services to this republic in the last few months than any other citizen in it, not including some high officials, is haled before the court upon an indictment and put under $10,000 bond and then threatened constantly with the penitentiary."

TOO MUCH FOR THEM

Robins Wintering in the Sand Dunes Perish of Cold.

Chesterton, Ind., Jan. 12.—The cold snap has resulted disastrously to large flocks of robins and other feathered songsters, which have been wintering in the great sand dunes near the shores of Lake Michigan. For a number of years flocks of robins and other birds have spent the winter in the sheltered places among the great sand piles, seemingly happy and contented. They have eked out an existence from frozen clusters of wild grapes and various seeds, and suffered little from the rigors of cold. One flock of fifty-six robins was found frozen to death, and not a sign of feathered life is to be seen among the dunes other than an occasional hawk or eagle. It is feared that all of the robins have perished in the cold.

NOT A FREE COUNTRY

Hammond Court Disabuses Wife Beater's Mind of a Misconception.

Hammond, Ind., Jan. 12.—Charles Bulouis, aged twenty-three, spanked his wife, aged sixteen, with a strap, and she caused his arrest. Bulouis told Judge Frank Green in the West Hammond court, that he thought this was a free country and he had a right to whip his own wife if he wished. Judge Green told him he was very much mistaken and sentenced him to 100 days in jail. "You got what was coming to you," said his wife, as he was led from the courtroom.

Children Played With Fire.

Greenfield, Ind., Jan. 12.—The fifteen-months-old child, a girl, of Mr. and Mrs. Bert O. Parish, is dead of burns. Three children were alone in room, and at play the baby's clothing caught fire. The mother heard the cries of the children and found the child's clothing in a blaze. She extinguished the fire, but the child had been fatally burned.

Fell to His Death.

Chesterton, Ind., Jan. 12.—While hunting near John Lockhart, thirty-three years old, a foreman in the Gary steel mills, fell from a tree into which he had climbed after a squirrel, and was killed.

CHAPTER III. THE GRANGER CASE.

THE new secretary, equally astonished, put her fingers to her lips, commanding silence, and Mrs. Mason widened the distance abruptly as Craven, at the slight noise, turned from the window.

"I'm Craven, Mr. Temple's legal adviser," he said. "I suppose you are the young woman Miss Graham has recommended?"

The young woman nodded cheerfully. She looked very girlish and graceful in spite of her dignity. "I trust I'll prove worthy of Miss Graham's recommendation," said she in low contralto tones.

"Miss Graham is thoroughly alive to the difficult nature of the work here just at present. I take it for granted she must have known you well and felt convinced of your ability to give satisfaction, otherwise—" Craven opened his large Nebraskan hand with an eloquent gesture.

Just for an appreciable fraction of a second two fleeting dimples stirred in the new secretary's oval cheeks.

"Miss Graham has known me for many years. She knows I will do my duty."

"Looks as if you would, anyhow," agreed Craven bluntly. He turned to Mrs. Mason, who still stood, eyes wide open and chin down, the picture of prim New England astonishment. "Mr. Temple's housekeeper, Miss Dale," said he. "You two must be friends."

The elder woman pulled herself together with an effort, and with a rather awkward consciousness held out her hand in response to Anna's well poised, nonchalant greeting. The Plymouth Rock conscience and diplomacy were not working well together, and she, poor lady, was in dire straits. "I understand I am to work here as well as in the New York office," said Anna, turning toward Craven and adroitly keeping his attention focused away from Mrs. Mason.

"Uh-huh!" assented he. "For the next few weeks we shall be unmercifully rushed. Even ordinarily Mr. Temple carries on a large part of his business here, but this case will give him more than ever to do."

"The Granger case?" questioned the new secretary, with strange avidity.

Craven nodded.

"Well, perhaps you'll be kind enough to explain this—this Granger case to me a bit now while we have time? It will save Mr. Temple that much exertion." She spoke with pretty little staccato catches in her breath, and her eyes were like stars. "An alert and intelligent young woman," commented the lawyer to himself.

"Why, yes, Miss Dale," he responded aloud. "The case is very simple. Sit down. About a year ago Mr. Temple rose to the presidency of the Gotham Trust company. Robert Granger was cashier. Cornelius Brady, a big financier, presented a check for $700,000. Mr. Temple did not feel justified in certifying this check, and Brady, without Temple's knowledge, went to Granger and induced him to certify it, making the trust company responsible for the money. Now, Granger had no right to do this, you understand. It was an overcertification. And the overcertification of that check, coming as it did just before the panic, helped in large measure to bring on the failure of the Gotham Trust company."

"But this Granger, did he not have a defense?" asked the young woman eagerly, watching Craven covertly from under her black lashes.

"Defense? Sure," granted he. "He lied. Tried like the devil to convince the jury that Temple had given him an order."

"And there had been no order—written or verbal?"

"I said that Granger lied, Miss Dale. He had a fair trial. He was convicted and sent to Sing Sing. The jury gave a rightful verdict."

"But why, may I ask, why has this case come up again if it is all settled and done for?" She brought the tips of her little gloved hands together in a play of potted interest.

"Well, Brady, the financier, has been doing a lot of talking, you see. Granger's conviction reflects pretty blackly on him. Then, the sensational yellow journals have taken it up—you know the way. I should advise you, Miss Dale, if you wish to become an efficient secretary to Mr. Temple, to arrive quickly at a belief in the guilt of that Granger, now justly confined in the prison yonder." He nodded across and up the river toward the grim walls of Ossining.

"I understand, Mr. Craven. I have come to do my duty, and I shall be guided only by the truth," she said, with low, even serenity. But in the palm of her right hand glove where she had clutched it fiercely there was a tragic rent.

"Right. That's common sense," said he appreciatively, pulling out his watch

"Now, Mrs. Mason will show you to your room. I must go to meet Mr. Temple. Suppose he'll wish to see you as soon as he gets here. Head over heels with things to do. Just look at that—lordy, lordy!" He indicated the littered desk and floor, and with quick, gingerly strides quit the library.

"Mrs. Mason, oh, to think of finding you here!" Just so soon as the door was closed Anna had rushed to the elder woman and was kissing her exuberantly on both cheeks. A third kiss she let fall neatly on the spick and span gray head.

"And you, Anna Shepherd! You were only fifteen when I saw you last, but I'd have recognized you anywhere. Dear, dear child, for the love of heaven what are you doing here under an assumed name? What does it mean?"

"Well, first it means that I'm not Anna Shepherd either any more. I've been married for nearly eight years. Mrs. Mason, Fancy!" She held her out at arm's length and looked smilingly down into the woman's surprised eyes.

"And I've two boys, just the finest, bonniest boys in the whole world. Really and truly they are!"

"I'm sure of it, I'm sure of it," acquiesced Mrs. Mason. "How could you help having children of that sort? You know I always had a very warm spot in my heart for you, Anna. Your mother and I!"

"Oh, I know, I know! Poor, beautiful young mother of mine!" Hastily Anna brushed away a bit of undue moisture in her lustrous eyes. "How she used to preach love and ideals to me, and how you used to preach duty and principles! Have you still that little yellowed book compiled by your great-grandmother filled with clippings concerning the duties of motherhood, the goodness of woman and the inconstancy of man? I remember the margins of the book were strewn with old recipes for the dressing of meats, the preserving of fruits, the brewing of cunning cordials, all of which struck me as ministering to at least one constancy in man—his devotion to a good dinner, eh?" Anna laughed at the recollection.

"Yes, I still have it. And speaking of dinners, have you grown to be a good little housewife? I suppose your husband—but, by the way, you haven't yet told me your husband's name?" A vivid crimson surged to Anna's face, her slim neck, her little ears and open brow. "Then she threw back her pretty, petulant head proudly. "My husband's name is Robert Granger."

They stared for an instant at each other, woman to woman. Then Mrs. Mason gasped: "Robert Granger, the man?"

"The young wife looked at her old friend almost sternly. "The man who is in prison serving a term that Burton Temple should be serving. Oh, Mrs. Mason, what have I done? You must guard my confidence sacredly—you must! You will, won't you—you will?" She was white now and wide eyed with the import of it all.

"Why, yes, dear; of course—of course. But tell me, I don't understand. Why are you here?"

"I am here, Mrs. Mason, to find some evidence that will clear my husband's name and that will send the guilty man to Sing Sing in his place."

The soft insistence with which she pronounced her purpose was more startling than any violence could have been.

"How did you get Mary Graham's position?" pursued Mrs. Mason.

"You see, Mary and I have been friends, real friends, for years. We studied stenography in the same school ten years ago. We've kept up with each other ever since. When—when all this trouble came I asked her to help me, to see if she couldn't find some clew, something that would help somehow. It seems like a merciful providence that she had been sent here. She tried, but she couldn't. Finally she suggested that I come myself. She made a plea of ill health, and so it was quite simply managed, you see."

"But the children, Anna?"

"Oh, it nearly broke my heart to leave them! But I had to, you see. There's no one else to do the fighting for their father's honor. If I can only find some evidence."

"You think there is hope of finding some?"

"Oh, there is hope. But I've got to fight for it, and, dear God, I'm going to! I'm going to meet this Burton Temple, and I'm going to fight him. I'll be his faithful secretary, but I'll spy upon him; I'll be his shadow. There must come some unguarded moment when his mask will fall. I'll do his bidding, oh, yes, my hands rifling his desk. He'll know what it is to have an outraged mother spying at his side!"

"S-s-h, dearie! Some one will hear. You're overwrought."

"There is something almost tigerish in mother love, isn't there, Mrs. Mason? That's how I feel sometimes, quite like a tigress. I wonder if you can understand the agony of it when my boys ask me about their father. 'Where's father?' 'Why does he stay so long?' 'When's he coming home?' And I have to look into their baby faces and lie to them. When they give me their morning kiss I lie to them. When they say their prayers I lie. I even let the little tots lie to God. And, oh, the questions they can ask! Of course I know that God, being God, will understand—that he alone can make allowances for a mother's love and lies, but the most miserable part of it is that soon these lies will be no good. Now I can delude them by some trumped up story of travel and foreign lands, but soon at school they will be told, they will be taunted. Oh, the torture!"

Mrs. Mason, wishing to distract her attention from this tragic note, said: "But their father, tell me a little about him. I know, however unjustly he may be suffering at present, that he is in reality a strong, forceful man, a man who can do big things. I always knew my little Anna would marry a man like that."

There was a slight pathetic uplifting of the lovely eyebrows, then an indescribably delicate smile, with just the faintest hint of sadness, as Anna Granger slowly shook her head.

"No, Bobs isn't that kind at all," she said. "He's of the gentle, sweet, appealing sort, not forceful, and he'll never do big things, but there are other qualities which can make up for forcefulness, don't you think? And he's clever. He was advanced rapidly in the Gotham Trust company. Only—sometimes when I'm very tired and spent—I long for the lion strength. It's dreadful for a woman as young as I am to feel so utterly weary."

She walked unthinkingly over to the big bay window. There beyond the blue flowing Hudson the grim prison walls smote her vision.

"Oh, what was I saying?" she cried, with a little penitent sob. "I feel like a traitor to Robert. Poor, dear boy, suffering up there for another's crime. He may have his—his weaknesses and failings—which of us has not? But at least he's not the sort ever to be guilty of theft, and he's just the best father and husband in the world. Forget what I said, Mrs. Mason. You will, won't you?"

"To be sure, dearie—to be sure. I think you're a noble woman, Anna—a model wife. And what's better, a brave mother." She studied quietly with herself for a few seconds, while Anna gathered her poise. Possibly providence had decreed that she remain under this uncongenial roof for the sole purpose of watching over this poor, motherless girl. Then:

"You see, dear, when you came I had just decided it was my duty to leave Mr. Temple. Now I am going to stay and help you in your brave endeavor. I'll stay at least till his mother gets back. She's abroad now, and oh, such a woman! You'd love her, Anna. Poor thing, she just worships her son. Sent me to the other day for an old photograph of his which she'd forgotten. While I think of it I'll take it out of the album now."

"Let me see what he looks like, this man," said Anna, as Mrs. Mason lifted out a print from the book.

"It was taken some ten years ago, I believe, but it's a good likeness," Mrs. Mason remarked as she handed it to her.

Anna glanced at it, then stepped back breathing hard.

"This Burton Temple?" she stammered incredulously.

Mrs. Mason was occupied in replacing the album and did not notice how her face had suddenly gone white, nor did she hear the pain of her under the breath whisper, "The old, unknown prince of my dreams."

Anna threw the photograph down in a little paroxysm of disdain.

"Don't like his face?" queried Mrs. Mason, looking up.

"It isn't that." She laughed bitterly, the sort of laugh which had first visited her lips a year ago among the honeysuckle vines. "It's another ideal smashed, that's all. Mrs. Mason, do you know," she tapped the likeness contemptuously, "I used to pass this man nearly every day when I was in Forbes' office—that was the first and only stenographer's position I ever held—coming in and out of the Exchange building. I never knew who he was, but there was a something about him, a set of the jaw, a swing of the shoulders, all integrity and force—something that stamped him to me as vital and eager, a prince among men. He carried his head up, his chin forward. He seemed to be cleaving his way manfully through life. He was the fairy prince of my girlish dreams. Oh, I wish—I wish it hadn't been he!" There was a very childish tremble in the brave mouth, but she went on:

"Amid all the incriminating mud they cast at the big successful men of the day I've always clasped this man's picture to my heart, saying, 'Here's one at least who is fine and straight and big.'"

There was an unutterable, dumb loneliness in the young face, a forlorn lingering of the fingers, as unconsciously she touched the discarded picture once again. One has seen a woman look just in the same way as she has touched the clothes of her little dead child.

"And now, instead of being fine and straight and big, he's unprincipled and scheming and vicious, like all the rest. Bang goes another ideal, Mrs. Mason. He's the man who has branded the father of my boys as a thief."

"S-sh!" cried Mrs. Mason warningly again. There were heavy strides coming down the corridor. The door of the library opened abruptly. Anna Granger had just time to collect her self as the president of the Gotham entered, followed by Cato, his huge mastiff.

"You'll have to jump right in and take up the work where my secretary left off, Miss Dale," said he after the few preliminaries of courtesy had been exchanged. "I shall give you," waving his hand vaguely, "the keys to the city. There are no limitations. You will receive my mail and open it." He paused for a second. "No; there is one source of communication I wish to remain private. Anything coming to me from the New York detective bureau you will kindly hand to me unopened."

"Precisely, Mr. Temple," agreed the new secretary without the quiver of an eyelash. The president of the Gotham Trust company continued:

"From now on I shall have an unusual amount of exacting business in connection with this Granger case. You may have heard of it?"

"Yes," assented she, unbuttoning her glove.

"Another thing, Miss Dale—a large portion of the time I shall require you to be up here. There are some days of course, when you will be free to go to your own home, but practically I shall want you to live in this house. My mother is abroad just now. I'm sorry. Mrs. Mason will make you comfortable in her absence. I trust and now she will show you to your room. Come down again when you've settled yourself if you are not too tired. There's plenty of work waiting, I see."

He turned to his much littered desk as his housekeeper conducted Anna to her room, and Cato settled down before the fireplace.

Practical Fashions

MISSIE'S EMPIRE DRESS.

This season the empire styles are in the lead and the frock herewith shown is a beautiful design in this style. The short waisted bodice is plain, except for a single, large revers at one side. There is also a trifle of fullness at the waist line in both front and back. The skirt is in three piece model. Messaline, crepe de chine, cashmere, fine serge and the like will be pretty in this style.

The pattern (5634) is cut in sizes 14, 16 and 18 years. Medium size requires 4 yards of 36 inch material.

To procure this pattern send 10 cents to "Pattern Department," of this paper. Write name and address plainly, and be sure to give size and number of pattern.

Mrs. Browning's Sonnet.

They say Mrs. Browning showed her husband with much diffidence the sonnets she had written in celebration of her love. "Sonnets from the Portuguese," she called them, incorporating in the title a love name he had for her—for he termed her the Portuguese because of her dark skin and eyes.

Faulty, it may be confessed, these sonnets are—hardly finished here and there, one might be tempted to say. But they are as spontaneous as the song of morning birds, as essentially true as the word we speak at unexpected meeting.—Ella W. Peattie, in Harper's Bazar.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS.

The Mission Study Class met with Mrs. Harry Jones on Ewing street this afternoon.

The heavy snow interfered seriously with the trains which pass through Seymour.

Mr. and Mrs. Asa Byrne and daughter of Anderson returned home this afternoon after attending the funeral of his mother, Mrs. L. P. Byrne.

R. L. Mosely, who was fined $30 and costs in the circuit court for assaulting Henry Brethauer, filed a motion for a new trial but it was overruled.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Byrne and daughter, who were called here by the sickness of his mother, Mrs. L. P. Byrne, returned to their home in Tipton this afternoon.

W. E. Weller and attorney Oscar Abel have opened new offices in W. A. Carter's building. Mr. Abel will practice law and Mr. Weller will continue in the insurance business.

Mr. and Mrs. James Cummings of Louisville, Miss Zella Davis of Crothersville, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Abbett of Columbus, were here today to attend the funeral of Mrs. L. P. Byrne.

The funeral service of Mrs. L. P. Byrne were held this morning from the First Baptist church of which she was a devoted member. Services were in charge of the pastor, Rev. F. M. Huckleberry and the members of the Woman's Relief Corps. Burial at Riverview.

MODERN WARFARE.

"On yonder hill," cried the general, scanning the battlefield with his glasses, "I see a black mass of men. What are they?"

"Camera flends," replied the second in command.

"And who are occupying that field to the southwest?"

"Those," answered the S. I. C., "are operators for the biograph."

"I see a battalion of curious-shaped guns."

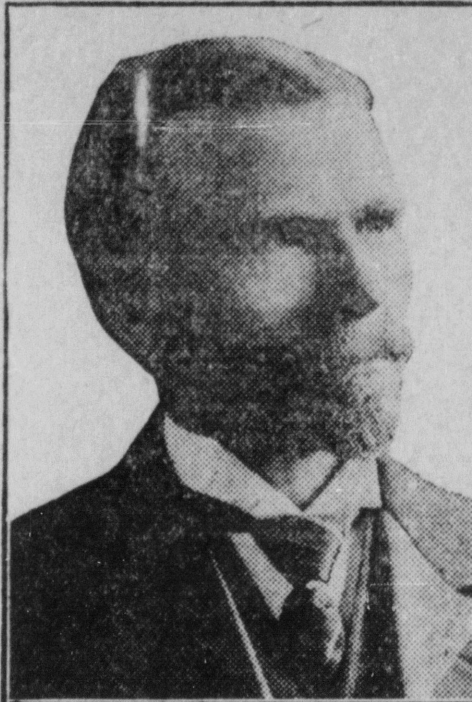

"They are not guns; they are gramophones and phonographs, in which are to be recorded the roar of the cannons and the cries of the wounded."

"Tis well!" exclaimed the general, stroking his mustache complacently. "Let the battle begin!"

TROPHY AGAIN GOES TO JOHNSON COUNTY

J. A. Stainbrook Is Acclaimed Corn King.

Lafayette, Ind., Jan. 12.—The new Indiana corn king is J. A. Stainbrook of Franklin, and once more Johnson county has won fame as the grand champion corn county of Indiana. The seventh annual state corn show, under the auspices of the Indiana Corn Growers' association, which held its annual convention at Purdue university in connection with the annual farmers' short course, was the best in the history of the organization, and the corn exhibited was the best ever raised in the state.

According to the judges and the managers of the show, Superintendent Russell B. East and President L. B. Clore of Franklin, at the head of the corn growers' association, the splendid corn on exhibition at the show sets a new standard for the Hoosier state. Hundreds viewed the exhibits.

J. A. Stainbrook, the new corn king of Indiana, is a neighbor of L. B. Clore, three times national corn champion and several times state champion. The two men own and operate farms a short distance apart and they are firm friends.

SHELLED THE CITY

Bahia the Scene of a Serious Conflict of Authority.

Bahia, Brazil, Jan. 12.—Trouble has arisen here over the refusal of the state government to carry out a judgment of the federal court granting a writ of habeas corpus in the cases of some opposition deputies, and there has been serious rioting.

The shops were closed and Fort Sao Marcello shelled the government building, which was set on fire and destroyed. Two houses in the Rua De Chile were also demolished.

Shuster Leaves Teheran.

Teheran, Persia, Jan. 12.—W. Morgan Shuster, accompanied by his wife and two children, left here yesterday and will proceed to Paris by way of the Caspian sea and Russia. Edward Bell, secretary of the American legation at Teheran, accompanied the Shuster party. It is expected that all of the Americans who have been assisting Mr. Shuster in his work as treasurer general will be retained in the Persian service for the present.

Turkey's Latest Move.

Alexandria, Jan. 12.—Three thousand Turkish regulars are marching toward the Suez canal with the object of crossing it and reaching Cyrenaica through Egypt and the Libyan desert.

S.S.S. GENERAL CURE FOR ALL POISONS

No case of contagious blood poison is ever cured until the last particle of the virus has been removed from the circulation. The least taint left in the blood will sooner or later, cause a fresh outbreak of the trouble, with all its hideous and destructive symptoms of ulcerated mouth and throat, copper colored spots, falling hair, sores and ulcers, etc. No other medicine so surely cures contagious blood poison as S. S. S. It goes down into the blood and steadily and surely drives out every particle of the infection. It absolutely and perfectly purifies the blood, and leaves this vital fluid as fresh, rich and healthy as it was before the destructive virus of contagious blood poison entered the circulation. S. S. S. quickly takes effect on the blood, and gradually the symptoms disappear, the health is improved, the skin cleared of all spots, sores and other blemishes, the hair stops coming out, the mouth and throat heal and when S. S. S. has cleansed the system of the poison no trace of the disease is left. S. S. S. cures contagious blood poison because it is the greatest of all blood purifiers, tested and proven for more than forty years. Book on this disease with suggestions for home treatment, and any medical advice sent free to all who write.
